How long does it take to clear a gas leak?

The smell should dissipate within a few hours. If it doesn't, contact your gas company and report the problem – there may be a more extensive leak. If anyone is suffering from nausea, headaches, dizziness or flu-like symptoms, call 911 immediately, as these are signs of carbon monoxide poisoning.

RELATED QUESTIONS

How long does it take for gas to clear out of house?

My wife did this recently in my house too, after I had rerouted several gas lines while installing a new stove. I'd open as many windows in the house as I could, but as morroben says, 2 hours is more than enough time for it to dissipate. If your stove has an extractor fan, run that for a while too just to be 100% sure.

How much does it cost to fix a gas leak in a house?

Here's an idea of what you can expect to pay for various repairs: Repairing or replacing a gas line to a single appliance usually costs anywhere from about $150 to $650. That includes labor and materials. Replacing the gas line running to the house costs $3,000 to $7,000 in most cases (labor and materials).
