Is Rum flammable?

2. Rum. Rums, especially ones with alcohol per cent over 60 or so, will burn nicely even if you pour just a little bit on top of your drink.

What whiskey is flammable?

Cognac, rum, or other flavorful liquors that are about 40% alcohol (80 USA proof) are considered ideal for flambé. Wines and beers have too little alcohol and will not flambé. High-alcohol liquors, such as Bacardi 151 or Everclear, are highly flammable and considered too dangerous by professional cooks.

Which Of These Liquors Is Flammable?

Liquor and fire rarely mix, unless you're a bartender that knows how to pour one scorching mixed drink. Rather than burning your distillery down trying to ignite the party, take a shot at this quiz about blazing booze. People have been lighting things on fire since the stone-age. And it makes sense - food tastes better cooked, keeping warm is kind of important, and exploding an excessive amount of fireworks during summer months is just human nature.

Is Vodka Flammable?

At around 20 percent alcohol by volume, though, it is not as flammable as some other types of alcohol such as rum and grain alcohol. The amount of alcohol content by volume is what determines the flammability rating of alcoholic beverages. Low-alcohol-content beverages such as beer or wine are not considered flammable.
