What vegetable are cats afraid of?

The latest chapter in this viral phenomenon is cat owners filming their felines' terrified reactions to cucumbers. In most of the videos, a cucumber will be placed near an unsuspecting cat while they are eating or resting, and when they notice the vegetable, they panic and get scared.

Why Are Cats Scared of Cucumbers?

Back to the evolution thing: Some experts believe cucumbers trigger a natural fear of snakes in cats. "Cats are genetically hard-wired through instinct to avoid snakes," Con Slobodchikoff, animal behaviorist and author of Chasing Doctor Dolittle: Learning the Language of Animals, told ABC News in 2015.

Are cats really scared of any vegetables?

Cats aren't really scared of vegetables, no. However, they will react to anything that startles them. The videos of cats with cucumbers made it look as though it was the cucumber itself that was frightening the cat and theories abounded about how it might be the smell of the cucumber, or the cat might think it was a snake - neither of which is likely to be true.

RELATED QUESTIONS

Why are cats scared of cucumbers and bananas?

Cucumbers aren't the only grocery which has failed to pass the cats' sniff test. They also appear to be unimpressed by bananas. This is thought to be due to the smell of the chemicals coming from the banana's outer skin which are known to be toxic to the felines.

Why are cats afraid of balloons?

Even so, many cats are afraid of the balloon even if it is on the ground. Because the balloon is filled with air, any sound that is in the area may either go through the balloon and be distorted, bounce off the balloon in unexpected directions, or be muted. ... Sound waves actually vibrate the balloon.
